

WRITING TEST

In this test most problems present themselves, as in an actual writing situation, not so much for recognition as for recall. Work out your solution to each problem and then select the multiple choice alternative which coincides (completely or in key identifying features) with your answer.

In problems not involving spelling, hyphens stand for missing letters. "Cómo, " for example, is represented as "C'-o," with the written accent appearing where there is a missing vowel. Two hyphens are used for the digraphs "ch" (--ico) and "ll" (caba--o). Parentheses are used to indicate the location of punctuation marks. Dashes represent words or parts of words.

If you find the solution you have chosen among the four alternatives and are sure that it fits, do not waste time analyzing possible meanings of the other three. Go on to the next problem. However, if no solution comes immediately to mind, examine the four choices briefly and the clues may help you recall the intended answer. Since you are working against the clock, do not spend too much time on any one problem.
